Lock II Massey, who lives in one of England's larger cities, which is quite in teresting in that it depicts war conditions among civilian, there, and give some interesting data as to the prices of foodstuffs, etc. Meats, button eggs, cheese, and various other everyday foods are as cheap and in our instances cheaper than in this country, though quantities allowed are frugal indeed, in the case of beef direcement as of a meaning or of beet three-quarters of a pound pe work per person being allowed. Mr Week per person being allotted. Mr. Massey relates meeting with a party of American soldiers on the train who rendered "The Loag. Long Trail" in a manner to delight all of their hearers, and he says twenty trainloads of U.S. A. lads passed through his town in one day. Following are two elippings from English papers of Aug. 28, which denote the interest with which the English view the arrival of the Americans. "The Big Battahions."

"The Mersey was crowded yesterday (Aug. 28) with big steamers bearing American troops, who had an enthusiastic reception on landing at Liverpool and Birkenhead." "Another Big Convoy of Americans

"Another Big Convoy of Americans Arrive."

"A big convoy from the United States arrived at Liverpool yesterday (Aug. 28). The men, who are of a line stamp, were welcomed at the landing stage by a band playing national airs, and flags were flying from the public buildings. The troops bad a very cordial reception as they marched through the city."

A noticeable feature of Mr. Massey's letter to his sister was the comment regarding their old acacquaintances, in every case mention acquaintances, in every case mention being made of the branch of the serice in which their children were erving, with notations of deaths, injuries, etc. It was stated that Eng-iand has sustained 800,000 casualties, but yet has six and one-half millions of men in the service.
